

To Whom It May Concern,

I have had the extreme pleasure of being Thor's hiring manager and supervisor for his time as a test engineer working for the Lavatory and Water/Waste division at Rockwell Collins.

Thor is a tireless worker who continuously meets and exceeds all expectations demanded of him. Management, peers and customers all praise his work and dedication. He is both an excellent team player and strong individual contributor; an innovative self-starter who rarely need supervision. He is solution oriented and strives to meet all project goals, yet handles pressure well and voluntarily works the extra time and effort required to meet demanding test deadlines. His work ethic is above reproach and has gained him admiration among his peers and co-workers. His numerous successfully completed projects and executed tests attest to his ability to get the job done, whatever it takes.

In particular, Thor's eagerness to learn and challenge himself puts him on par with engineers that have twice the experience, and his thoroughness assures that nothing is ever overlooked or missed.

Thor's contributions to Rockwell Collins has earned him recognition and trust, proving himself a key member integral to the success of the entire test team. He will make an invaluable asset to any organization and I highly recommend hiring him. You will not be disappointed.

Sincerely,

Jeff Whitaker
Test Engineering Supervisor
Rockwell Collins, Interior Systems (Lavatory and Water/Waste)